

El día de los muertos/ The Day of the Dead November 1 - 2

by Luis de la Garza

As we age, the more death surrounds us. It is simply the circle of life. For too many, death remains unthinkable and unspeakable.

El día de los muertos/The Day of the Dead is an opportunity to remember and honor those that have passed away. Usually, altars at home or at cemeteries are set up with photographs, marigolds, candles, incense, foodstuffs, sugar skulls, papel picado, and personal items of the deceased. It is a somber yet joyful affair where one deliberately takes time to remember the dearly deceased with this memento mori in the form of a makeshift altar.

Celebrate Día de los Muertos with Club 75 and Openhouse!

Thursday, October 26, 1 - 3:30PM

In-Person at 75 Laguna

Día de los Muertos, or Day of the Dead, is a celebration of life for the departed souls of our ancestors. It is celebrated across Latin America and is most recognizable as the holiday with the colorful calaveras (skulls) and calacas (skeletons). We welcome community members to participate in various creative activities that include sugar skull making, letter writing, and scanning photos to add to our Día de los Muertos altar. Staff and volunteers will be on hand to assist folks with creating ofrendas (offerings) to be placed on the altar.

RSVP at rsvp@openhousesf.org or 415-231-5871

This event is brought to you by Club 75 and Openhouse's Unidos and the Leadership Council on Queerness, Race, and Privilege

Is it really October?

As I get older, time seems to go faster. When I was a kid, the 1970s seemed to last forever! My perception of time accelerating is likely a result of my busy life - there never seems to be enough time. Of course, connecting age to deficiency, fragility, or lack is common in a society that prizes youth. October 7th is Ageism Awareness Day, a time for all of us to reflect on how internalized ageism, as well as externalized ageism, can impact our lives. Assuming that someone can or cannot do something based solely on age is an -ism whose time has come.

This month is also LGBTQ History Month, and October 11th is National Coming Out Day. When I was in college, we were so closeted that this was the day we all wore jeans to class—we wore jeans all the time but somehow that was what would set us apart. So much has changed for the better and we still have a long way to go. Together we make our community, region, and country a better place for all to be out, proud and included.

LGBTQ+ History is Filipino American History

by Theresa Arocena

In the '70s, Filipino Americans, being marginalized as an ethnic minority, were focused on survival. For those who were also LGBTQ+, they especially felt like they couldn't afford to "rock the boat." Many of their stories aren't archived, but the ones that are archived, speak to their will to not only live, but to love.

One such story is that of Filipino American Richard Frank Adams and his husband, Anthony "Tony" Corbett Sullivan. The two were legally married April 21, 1975 by a minister of the Metropolitan Community Church and progressive county clerk in Colorado. Unfortunately, their completely lawful marriage was not recognized as grounds to allow Sullivan permanent residency in the U.S. from Australia. To add insult to injury, the official letter from the Department of Justice that arrived in the mail in November 1975 contained only a single sentence as an explanation: "You have failed to establish that a bona fide marital relationship can exist between two f**."

Adams and Sullivan refused to give up and despite being told by a leader in the gay rights movement that, "This revolution is not about relationships," the two continued to fight for their marriage to be recognized. Thus, they filed the first lawsuit in America to seek recognition of a same-sex marriage by the federal government. The two would not win their suit and Adams and Sullivan left the U.S. for about 11 months before returning to the U.S. Sullivan would spend the next 30 years undocumented.

In 2012, Adams and Sullivan decided that in light of so many states beginning to legalize gay marriage, they would fly to Washington and do an affirmation ceremony. Instead of "death do us part," they planned to say, "as long as there is love."

Sadly, Adams died due to his cancer the day after they made these plans - just 3 years away from the 2015 SCOTUS ruling that legalized same-sex marriage in all 50 states.

On April 21, 2014, on their 39th wedding anniversary, Sullivan filed a motion with the Los Angeles Field Office of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) to reopen and reconsider Adams' petition for a marriage-based green card. "I should be allowed to continue my life here, even though it's in a state of widowhood."

Sullivan ended up receiving a letter from USCIS apologizing for the homophobic letter they received in 1975.

In 2016, after 40 long years, Tony Sullivan received his green card.

"They never managed to separate us."
